WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A disturbance off the central California coast will bring showers and thunderstorms to portions of northwest California through the end of the week. Some storms may be strong with heavy rain, hail, gusty winds, and occasional lightning. An isolated storm may impact coastal areas today through Thursday.

Medford Weather:

Numerous thunderstorms are likely across the southern half of the forecast area this afternoon and evening. A Flash Flood Watch has been issued to accent the potential for rapid rises in streams and rivers, as well as in urban areas. Showers and thunderstorms are in the forecast through Saturday, especially during the afternoons and early evenings. The most noticeable change in the weather, other than the rain and thunderstorms, will be significantly cooler temperatures expected later this week and into the weekend.

Reno Weather:

Thunderstorms capable of producing flash flooding are expected again today as low pressure remains near the northern California coast. As this low moves slowly inland Thursday and Friday, the threat for additional flooding will decrease as cooler temperatures will limit thunderstorm intensity. For this weekend, the low finally exits the region, resulting in fewer thunderstorms.

San Francisco Weather:

Seasonably cool temperatures are expected for much of the forecast area through the week and into the weekend as a low pressure system moves across central and northern California. This low will also bring the possibility of showers and isolated thunderstorms today and Thursday.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Thunderstorms today through Friday with heavy rain in the mountains, and potential flash flooding over mountains today.

Hanford Weather:

A weather disturbance will move across the region tonight and Thursday bringing the possibility of west side showers and Sierra thunderstorms today and continued Sierra thunderstorms through Friday. Below normal temperatures will stick around through the weekend with a gradual warming trend early next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A trough of low pressure approaching the area will bring night and morning clouds, fog and drizzle at times through Thursday. There will be a slight chance of showers and thunderstorms today and Thursday for the mountains of Ventura County. Temperatures that are cooler than normal will continue through Saturday.

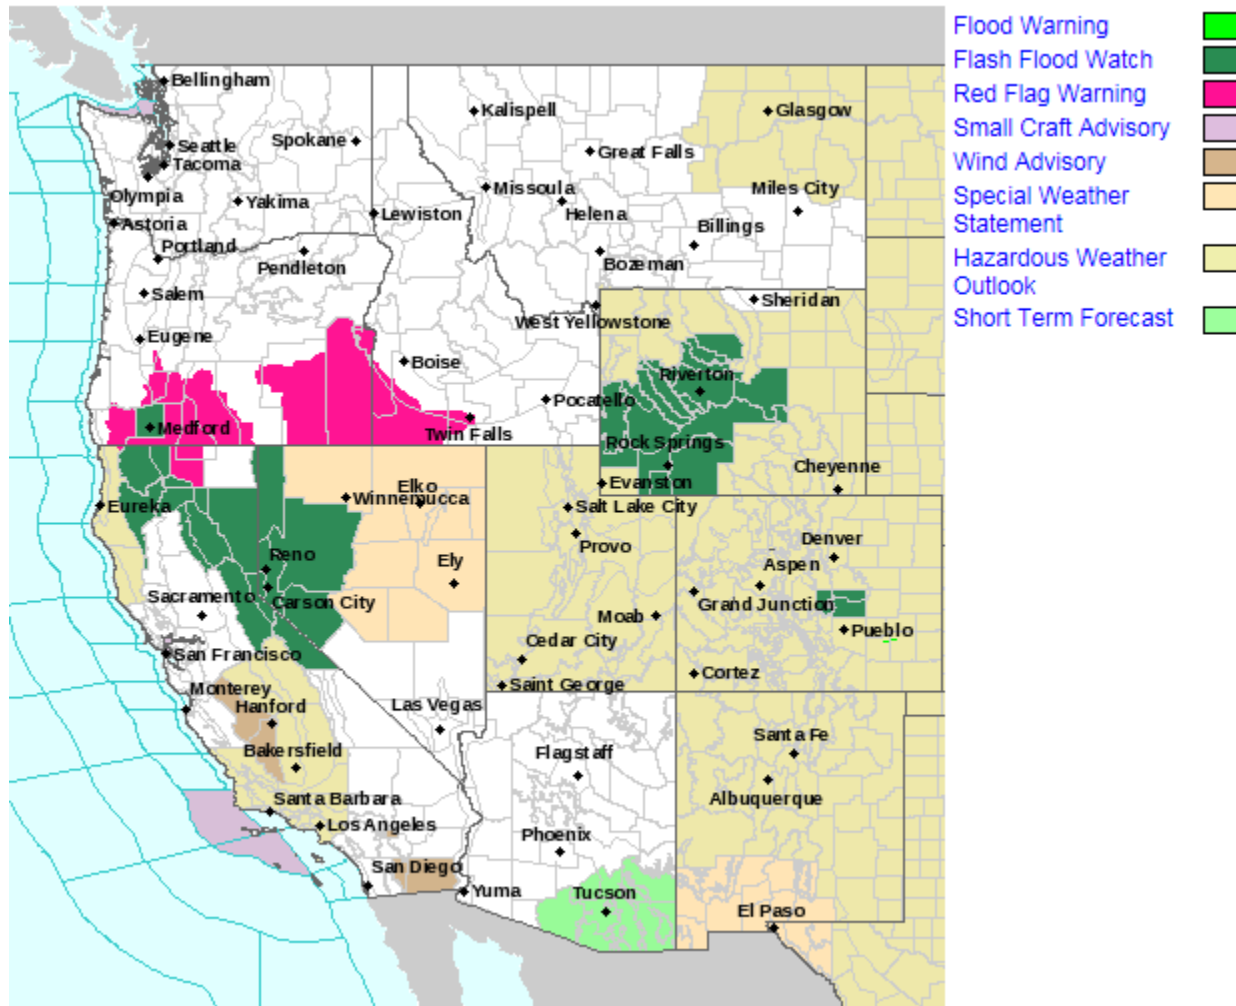

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

An unseasonably deep trough of low pressure off the central California coast will move inland through Thursday. The trough will bring cool weather and an unusually deep marine layer for early July, deep enough for pockets of light rain and drizzle west of the mountains during the next two late nights and mornings. It will also be windy in the mountains and deserts each afternoon. The trough will move east of the area this weekend, with warmer weather and the return of weak monsoonal flow early next week.

Southeast California Weather:

Thunderstorm chances will be significantly lower than usual for the middle of the monsoon season. Despite the lack of storm activity, temperatures will remain near to slightly below normal. This weekend and early next week, high pressure will strengthen again leading to warmer temperatures.
